

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

February 1, 2022

The House and Senate have reconvened and begun working on the multitude of bills that are still on the books. Issues that are very likely to get attention include the shortages of teachers, substitutes, and bus drivers; also gaining attention is the problem of deficits that have developed during the COVID. The issues related to curricula (particularly related to CRT) continue to bubble up. After returning last week, the legislature is mostly quiet again, with only one hearing so far on the schedule. Senate President Huffman has said that lawmakers have no plans to work on new Congressional maps before next week at the earliest, after the old maps were declared unconstitutional by the Ohio Supreme Court. Lawmakers have 30 days from the January 14 decision to adopt new maps or the process returns to the Ohio Redistricting Commission, who earlier this month voted along party-lines to pass another partisan gerrymander of the Ohio legislature.

Local School Chiefs Among Initial Group Of Superintendent Hopefuls

The deadline to apply to become the new state superintendent of public instruction has been extended as the State Board of Education continues to seek a search firm. The Department of Education, which initially requested resumes be sent to superintendent.search@education.ohio.gov by the end of 2021, is now accepting applications through March 1. Board President Charlotte McGuire said members are completing additional due diligence on two firms that could lead the search for the state's next K-12 chief after they scored closely upon initial review. The overall search process has been delayed by the board's decision to post a second request for proposals for search firms after the first resulted in no candidates viewed as viable. Ms. McGuire said she does not see meeting a given deadline as the most important part of the superintendent search. "Personally, I'm not in a hurry because we have over a million children ... and we're talking about future leaders of Ohio," she said. "We're talking about future parents, future business leaders, future government leaders, future tech leaders, and we need the right person to go to the next level for the education system of Ohio." Superintendent applicants who have filed their resumes with ODE thus far are:

- Rodriguez Broadnax, superintendent of Michigan's Clintondale Community Schools.
- Shannon Cox, superintendent of the Montgomery County Educational Service Center.
- Lindy Douglas, superintendent of southeast Ohio's Alexander Local School District.
- Richard Duncan, superintendent of West Virginia's Roane County Schools.
- Richard Fulkerson, chief administrative officer of Muskingum Valley Health Centers.
- William Harbron, superintendent of New Hampshire's Dover School District.
- Michelle Grimm, high school counselor with Dover City Schools and past president of the Ohio School Counselor Association.
- Larry Hook, superintendent of southwest Ohio's Springboro Community City School District.
- Thomas Hosler, superintendent of northwest Ohio's Perrysburg Exempted Village School District.
- Jennifer Judkins, assistant state superintendent for the Maryland State Department of Education.
- Dewayne McClary, senior director of networks and partnerships for Digital Promise Global.
- Teresa Moon, former instructional leadership specialist for the U.S. Department of Defense Education Activity.
- Jonathan Moore, deputy superintendent for student achievement for the Nevada Department of Education.
- Lawrence Paska, executive director of the National Council for the Social Studies.
- Heather Peske, senior associate commissioner for the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.
- John Pfeiffer, a staffer with Ohio's Office of Budget and Management.

Ohio Association of Colleges for Teacher Education

- David Quattrochi, superintendent of eastern Ohio's Carrollton Exempted Village School District,
- Kimberly Richey, president of RealignEd and former acting assistant secretary with the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights.
- Zito Sabonete.
- Richard Schroeder, associate partner with the International Center for Leadership in Education.
- Art Stellar, vice president of the National Education Foundation.
- Asheer Tashfeen, assistant superintendent of Zenith Academy Schools in Columbus.

Ms. McGuire said she has not yet reviewed the applicants, noting the extended deadline for submissions. The board president said she would encourage anyone with a serious interest in the job to apply and not wait to be sought out during the search process. "If they have a passion for it, they shouldn't wait to be asked," she said.
